Find the best mattress for you easily
Perfect Mattress Search System

Unconscious and trial-and-error mattress choices affect sleep quality and human well-being. In order to prevent all these negativities, we have prepared Smart Match Mattress Finding Analysis with algorithms which are the result of detailed researches carried out by Yataş Sleeping Laboratories. The Smart Match application allows you to easily find the right mattress for yourself by evaluating your specific information and sleeping needs.

Gender

Even if the height and weight measurements are the same, the body structure, weight distribution and spine patterns of men and women are different. For this reason, although the mattresses are designed as unisex, the most accurate analysis is structured with the knowledge of gender.

Age

Age changes the need for support of the spine, independently of height, and weight.

Sleep Position

Mattresses have different adaptability according to sleeping position. Therefore, sleep position information is a very important parameter for mattress-body mapping.

Height - Weight

Stature changes the pressure applied to the mattress. It directly affects the support that the mattress gives to the spine. Weight is an important parameter that determines how much support the mattress should provide for the correct spinal position.

Pain Area (if any)

The pain felt during sleep decreases the quality of sleep, while the pain felt after sleep reduces the quality of life. To reduce pain, a body-compatible mattress should be selected.

Sweating Problem (if any)

Mattresses that absorb moisture from sweating and remove from the body, and dry up quickly and reduce the feeling of wetness, help to increase sleep quality.

Allergy Risk (if any)

If you feel nasal obstruction or pruritus irrespective of the season, you may have dust mite allergy. It is recommended that asthma patients choose mattress that provide protection against dust mites.

After you answer the questions in a complete and correct way, you will be ready to meet with Yataş sleep with the results that will be sent to your e-mail address.

MAGNETIC SLEEP REVOLUTION WITH YATAŞ TESLA SLEEP MATTRESS

Every living or inanimate being has a magnetic field, weak or strong. Human beings also need the ideal magnetic field to keep their lives healthy.

How does the magnetic field affect sleep quality?

If functions well, the magnetic energy-sensitive "pineal gland" in the brain will secrete the melatonin hormone, which regulates sleep rhythm, relaxes muscles and strengthens the immune system. The magnetic field improves blood circulation by acting on iron oxides in the blood and increases sleep quality.

Specialist Opinion

INSOMNIA

Medicana Çamlıca Hospital
Neurology Specialist
Spec. Dr. Selda ÖZŞAHİN

“50% of people suffer from insomnia at some point in their lives. For these people, insomnia has a meaning beyond being unable to sleep, leading to failure in psycho-social and occupational areas, thus greatly reducing quality of life.”

In acute sleep disturbances ranging from 1 to 3 days, depending on change of place and medical conditions, a person may have gotten stressed or experienced an emotional trauma. In this case, the treatment is carried out by detecting the wrong behaviour and overcoming the fear of being conditioned "I can not sleep". For sleep disturbances continuing more than a few days, a neurologist should be consulted. Since chronic sleep disorders that last more than 3 weeks are related largely to psychiatric causes, the underlying problem should be investigated very well. If a person's biological clock does not match the sleep time, a long period of sleep disturbance may occur.

Alcohol, caffeine, smoking, stimulant use, a medical chronic or painful disease, and such neurological disorders as Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, stroke can also cause long-term sleep disturbances. In such cases, it is not possible to resolve the sleeping problem unless the underlying problem is corrected first and the appropriate treatment method is used. In addition to these treatments, one can get rid of long-term insomnia and sleep disturbances by paying attention to sleep hygiene and consulting a medical specialist.

Specialist Opinion

CHOICE OF MATTRESS & PILLOW

Medicana Çamlıca Hospital
Physical Therapy and
Rehabilitation Specialist
Prof. Dr. Tunç Alp KALYON

“The choice of the wrong mattress and pillow will cause the natural curve in the waist and neck areas to deteriorate and invites spinal diseases.”

While a proper mattress helps to preserve the body's natural backbone, a wrongly selected mattress causes pressure on the muscles, nerves and veins, causing waist and back pain.

A good mattress should support the waist, back, head, neck and knee areas. The excessively stiffness of your mattress causes the formation of gaps between the body and the mattress, while the soft mattresses do not support the areas where the body is pressed. This causes some incarceration on the blood circulation and the brain is stimulated for blood circulation.

Therefore, you turn right and left many times during the night and cannot pass to deep sleep. When buying a mattress, firmness, softness and comfort of the mattress should be decided by lying on the mattress.

The material used in the mattress, the quality of the fabric on the exterior and the spring system used are very important.

Before making a decision, this information should absolutely be obtained about the mattress that is desired to be purchased.

The mattress should also protect the body heat. In order to prevent sweating and cold, attention should be paid to the technologies in the mattress or the summer-winter use characteristics.

For a comfortable and sound sleep choosing the ideal pillow is also very important. Lying without pillows is not good for neck health and sleeping on very thick pillows is also inconvenient. Pillows that do not force the natural curve of the neck spine and that support it are the most convenient.

WHY DOES QUALITY OF SLEEP MATTER?

Quality of sleep is vital to remain relaxed physically and mentally during the day. Frequently interrupted sleep or incomplete sleep without getting a rest causes adverse effects such as tiredness, lack of concentration, stress and labor loss. Sleeplessness poses a threat to your immune and repair system especially when it becomes chronic. It increases the risk of infection and various illnesses. A good sleep improves the quality of your life. The body repairs itself most effectively during sleep and provides the opportunity to recover from the physical, mental and emotional stress of the day. If you pay attention, you will see that we feel irritable, ill-tempered or tepid when we go to bed late or do not get enough sleep for a couple of days consecutively. Good and regular sleep is necessary for a healthy emotional growth.

How Long Should a Good Sleep Last?

A healthy adult needs between seven and nine hours of good quality sleep a night. This duration may change, depending on our diet or the day's circumstances. The body would require more time to rest following a busy day of physical and mental activity. Malnutrition or a heavy diet takes away from the quality of our sleep, whereas nutritional meals will help our body recover faster and feel more energetic.

“Unique solution for back and lower back pain...”

HOW DOES YOUR MATTRESS AFFECT THE HEALTH OF YOUR SPINE AND QUALITY OF SLEEP?

A correct mattress is essential for a good sleep. Wrong choice of mattress creates pressure on the muscles, nerves and veins, and thus causing lumbar and back pain. It is important to preserve the spine curve of the body during sleep.

Give due consideration when choosing a mattress!

At Yataş, each mattress is manufactured with the objective of preventing lumbar and back pains, and protecting the health of your spine. You need to choose the correct mattress for an uninterrupted and sound sleep without turning left and right, or experiencing lumbar and back pain. The first step to getting a quality sleep is to become informed regarding the technologies used on your mattress.

LYING POSITIONS AND IMPACTS ON THE BODY

Medicana Çamlica Hospital
Physical Therapy and
Rehabilitation Specialist
Prof. Dr. Tunç Alp KALYON

“It is imperative that a proper lying position has to be taken for the spinal cord which gets tired during the day and to relax the muscles.”

The spine, which provides the basic support of our body, consists of 33 bones arranged on top of each other. Among the vertebrae are cartilage cushions called "discs", and in between the discs is a gel-like core. The spinal cord is a nervous tissue that goes down to the waistline just after it leaves the brain. From there, 31 pairs of nerves come out to the right and left, and all this system is protected by the spine. Once these nerves have departed from the backbone, they are distributed to the arms, legs, or body and fulfil the functions of the senses and movements of the area they go to.

Not everyone has an ideal lying position. For example, some people sleep comfortably on the back position. This position is not preferred by couples especially because it increases the risk of snoring despite relieving the spine.

In the freetail position, on the other hand, there may be inconveniences such as pressure in the chest and abdominal cavities in addition to stretching the neck and waist spine. The most recommended lying position is side-position in accordance with the structure of the letter "S" of the spine. In this position the arms and legs should not be shrinking fully. The back and arms should be bent and the knees should be pulled slightly toward the abdomen. In particular, we recommend those who suffer from lower back and neck problems and pregnant women to lie in this position and avoid from the supine position. In addition to all these, the use of non-light curtains, with the average temperature of the bedroom being 21-22 degrees, will also facilitate a good quality and restful sleep.

DEFINITION OF QUALITY SLEEP

Medicana Camlica Hospital
Pulmonology Specialist
Spec. Dr. Ertuğrul Serdar AKIN

“The definition of insomnia and sleep disorder can vary from person to person, the most common case we face is having difficulties at falling asleep. Staying asleep after having falling asleep is another form of sleep disorder. Stress and sleep disorders are diseases of the new age and they decreases the quality of life and cause many diseases.”

Uninterrupted and regular sleep, which are very important for our health, affect our comfort and standard of living the next day. In particular, these conditions affect overweight patients with respiratory disorders such as asthma and copd or disorders such as hypertension, coronary failure. It is important that patients with this type of disorders should have a proper mattress and pillow to ensure a smooth and comfortable sleep. In addition, we recommend patients with neck complaints, such as cervical disc hernia and reflux to pay strict attention to the correct selection of mattress and pillow and patients with allergies should select antiallergic mattresses and pillows.

The selection of mattresses and pillows is becoming more important as generally we sleep away one-third of our lives. Therefore, we emphasize and advise all our patients paying attention to mattress and pillow selection.

CONNECTION BETWEEN SLEEP AND DIET

Medicana Camlica Hospital
Nutrition And Dietetics Registered
Dietician Rd. Yavuz ÇELİK

“Even though our sleep pattern is determined by a genetic clock, environmental and biological factors also have a significant impact on the duration and quality of sleep. In particular, excessive and high-calorie food consumption, malnutrition, lack of movement during the day and depression are factors that reduce sleep quality.”

Sleep is an important vital physiological requirement, just as vital as nutrition or breathing is. For this reason, sleep should be seen as an important determinant of health, affecting the quality and comfort of the individual.

Sleep can be defined as the period of time when the individual is not active, his physical activities end and his/her body needs to rest. This period of time lasts 7-8 hours, but it may exceed 10 hours according to age group.

Adequate sleep quality, environment and conditions are essential for our body to be more vigorous and functional and ready for the next day. Going about some of these conditions; most important ones are physical conditions (sleep environment) and physiological conditions (Nutrition).

Examining nutrition in detail; selecting quantities and qualities of food that covers the needs of the individual would be our first pick, followed by foods which are easy to digest and methods of cooking of these foods and approximately 3-5 hours before sleeping the food consumption should be ended which is the necessary time needed for the foods to be digested. When the physical conditions are met:

- A warm shower if possible
- Clean mattress, flat sheet, duvet covers, pillows etc., relaxing pattern and colour selections
- Mattress selection
- Well ventilated room with optimal temperature
- Relaxing colours on the walls
- Dark and quiet environment

EFFECTS OF INSOMNIA ON HEART HEALTH

Medicana Camlica Hospital
Cardiology Specialist
Assoc. Prof. Dr. Murat YALÇIN

“Poor quality sleep causes coronary failure, hypertension and cardiac arrhythmia symptoms to increase. For this reason, a good quality sleep is important for cardiovascular diseases i.e. disorders of heart and veins.”

Some of the hormones secreted at night during a good quality sleep are like sighs of relief for our cardiovascular diseases. The cardiovascular system which approximately works one hundred thousand times a day relaxes relatively at night. Thanks to these hormones, our heart rate slows down at night with the help of sleep, and our blood pressure values are reduced, allowing the cardiovascular system to lighten its burden. Poor quality of sleep or insomnia causes the heart rate and blood pressure during sleep at night to increase what may lead to cardiovascular diseases. One of these diseases is heart attack which usually occurs towards morning and is closely related to insomnia. Another cardiovascular disease is paralysis. While it is expected to decrease throughout the night, high blood pressure due to insomnia may invoke paralysis. Therefore, hormones secreted during a good quality sleep may protect against cardiovascular diseases.

In particular, disruptive rhythm disorders may occur when a sleepless night is spent after an intense day of work stress and fatigue. These are mostly rhythm disorders called extrasystoles, which occur mostly in form of stuttering heart attacks. Patients feel the deviancy in their heartbeat after a sleepless night other than a normal night. Therefore, a body that wakes up well rested and relaxed will be more at ease in terms of arrhythmia.

LINK BETWEEN SLEEP AND DIABETES

Medicana Çamlıca Hospital
Internal Medicine Specialist
Spec. Dr. Memduh CAYMAZ

“More than 70% of diabetics have sleep problems. Diabetics suffer under following emerging syndromes: snoring, sweating, excessive urination at night, waking up with dryness in the mouth, feeling tired when waking up, and daytime sleepiness.”

Diabetes is a common condition and its frequency is dramatically rising all over the world. According to a study conducted in the 2000's the frequency of diabetes in Turkey was around 7%; another study in early 2010's revealed that it was around 13%. This big number means an increase of almost 100%. Diabetes keeps snowballing all over the world. Studies have shown that sleep problems are more common among diabetic patients. Almost one in three diabetic patients has sleep problems. Diabetes itself can directly lead to sleep problems, and patients urinate excessively at night due to high levels of blood sugar.

Another concept is diabetic neuropathy; The high level of blood sugar among diabetic patients causes damages and devastation to the neural crest. Therefore, patients may feel burning, aches and pains in their feet at night. Also diabetics suffer from problems such as heart conditions, strokes more frequently and in parallel with that sleep problems arise.

Specialist Opinion

INSOMNIA DURING AND AFTER PREGNANCY

Medicana Çamlıca Hospital
Obstetrician and Gynecologist
Op. Dr. Aylin AKINCI

“Continuous sleepiness is observed in expectant mothers, especially during the first 6 months of pregnancy. At the end of 6 months, some physical ailments due to the growth of babies and the restriction of the freedom of the mother’s movement during sleep make sleeping more difficult.”

To minimize physical discomfort during this period:

- Remove caffeinated beverages from your diet.
- Decrease fluid intake 2-3 hours before sleeping.
- Set your sleep hours.
- Do not forget daytime exercises.
- Take precautions such as warm shower for cramps.
- If you wake up at night, do things that will make you feel comfortable.
- Especially in the last few months, stretch your knees to yourself and lie on your left side.
- Get support from specially designed pregnant cushions.
- Choose mattresses that adapt to different body types, that are sensitive to weight and pressure.

may occur within the first 3 months after birth. This physical and psychological deprivation can wear off the mother’s own health, the process of looking after the baby, and her relationships with her partner.
